Cuesta College Holds 20th Annual Learning Disabilities Conference

The 20th Annual Central Coast Learning Disabilities (LD) Conference will be held for parents, teachers, professionals, persons with learning disabilities and all interested parties on November 21 at Cuesta College. The conference will feature Dr. G. Reid Lyon and Dr. Sam Goldstein as industry experts and keynote speakers.

Dr. Lyon has written, co-authored and edited more than 120 articles, books and chapters addressing evidence-based education, learning differences and disabilities in children. Prior to his recent position as executive vice president for research and evaluation at Higher Ed Holdings, he worked as the chief of the Child Development and Behavior Branch at the National Institutes of Health. He has appeared on NBC, CBS, ABC and CNN to discuss issues relevant to child development and educational policies.

Dr. Goldstein is a psychologist with areas of study in school psychology, child development and neuropsychology. He is an established author and is licensed as a developmental disabilities evaluator in Utah, working at the Neurology, Learning and Behavior Center in Salt Lake City.

Pre-registration for the LD Conference is $70 or $90 at the door. To register, contact Cuesta College Community Programs, 546-3132 or registration forms can be found online at www.communityprograms.net.
